Lewa has strict rules for game drives - we urge you take into account the following while out on the conservancy:

- Please respect your guide's requests
- No overcrowding at sightings, keep some distance
- No off-road driving in certain areas
- At sightings, speak quietly
- Do not litter
- On night drives, no flash photography is allowed

CONSERVATION IN ACTION

Guests are encouraged to explore Lewa Wildlife Conservancy's "behind the scenes" operations to get an understanding for how conservation and anti-poaching really works, and to see all that Lewa is doing for wildlife and the surrounding communities. This includes visiting the Operations Room, Tracker Dog Unit, meeting the security or anti-poaching team, and visiting the Lewa school and clinic.

GAME VIEWING

We are fortunate to overlook a natural waterhole and wetland, which has become a favourite passage and sanctuary for wildlife. Some of the best game viewing is done right from the lodge itself, on the deck overlooking the busy waterhole and wildlife on the lawns.

CLIMATE AND SEASONS

With Kenya's arid North to one side, and the lush foothills of Mount Kenya on the other, Sirikoi enjoys a lovely spring-like climate almost all year round. Mornings are brisk, midday is rather warm, and evenings are always cool enough to appreciate a fire.

- Altitude: 5,500ft.
- Rainfall: Mid-April to mid-May and November are usually the rainy seasons.
- Temperature: January to March are the warmest months, and June to September is a bit cooler.

FAMILY FUN

We offer flexibility around meal times and menus for children, as well as educational and fun activities and child-care. Children thrive in discovering a new place and exploring freely around the Sirikoi grounds – and also love to visit the vegetable garden to see the chickens and rabbits!

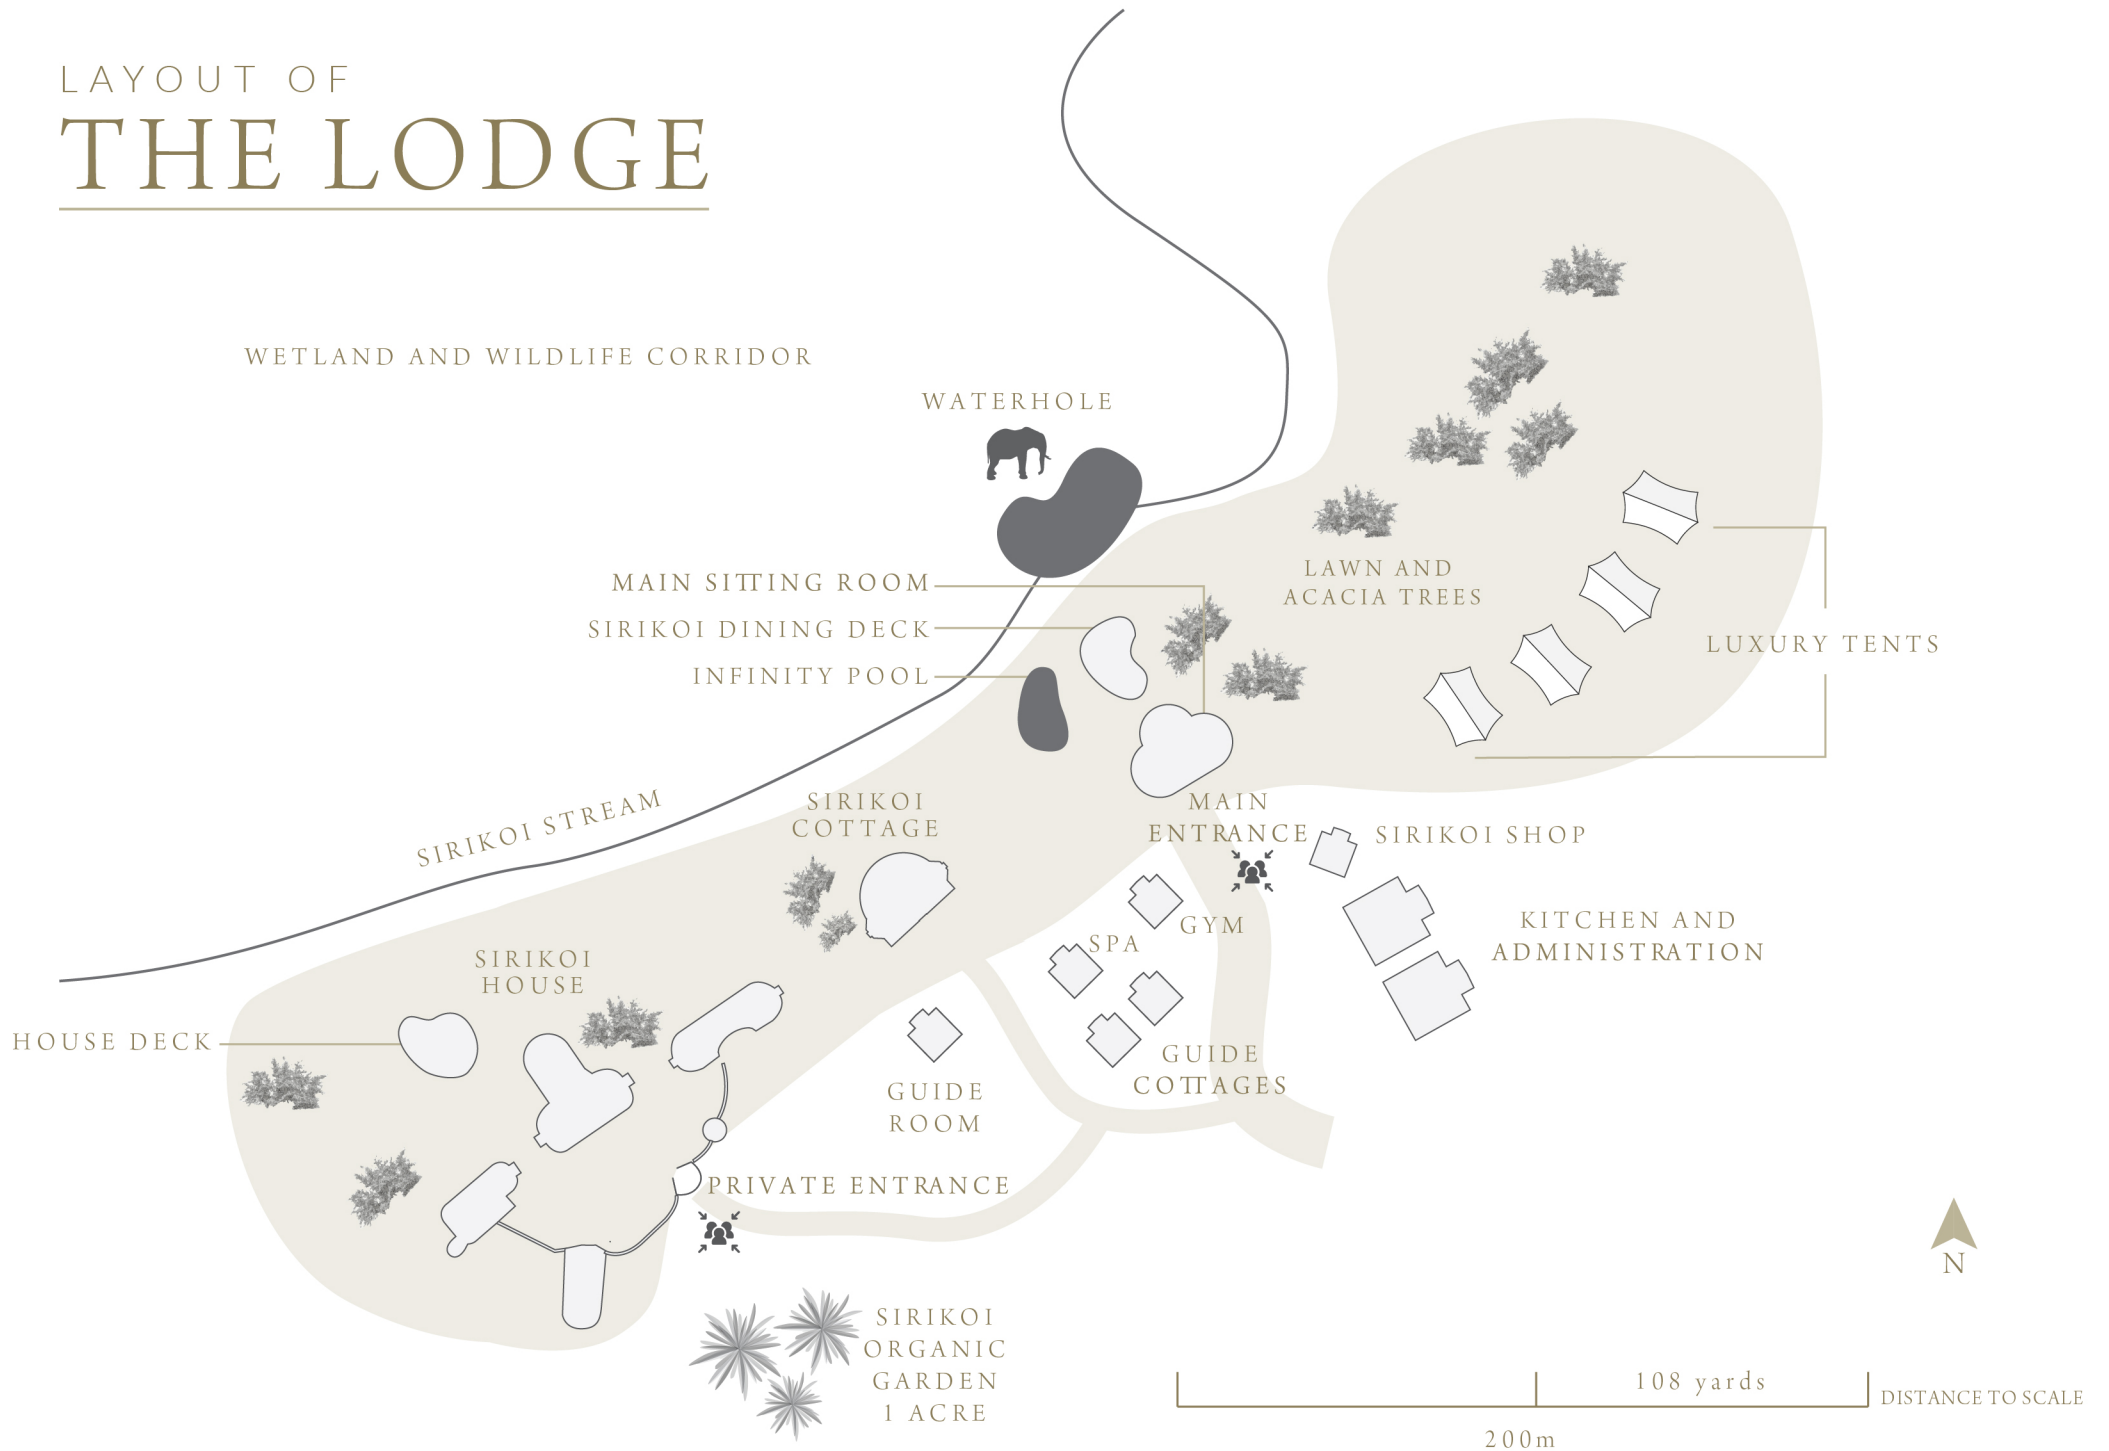

BACK-OF-HOUSE

Visiting the vegetable garden and taking a back-of-house tour is an unexpected highlight for most guests. Seeing first hand what is involved in organic farming, the solar bank and observing our sustainably and conservation efforts, as well as the furniture-making in the workshop, and the kitchen in full swing, is fascinating and hugely rewarding. Going 'back of- house' brings a new dimension of appreciation for the luxury in the wild that Sirikoi offers.

GENERAL

- You are at altitude so do make sure you drink sufficient fluids to avoid dehydration.
- The housekeeper will close your tent in the evening and spray the room for insects.
- The monkeys can be very naughty and come into your tent to steal biscuits and sugar left over from your early morning tea. Please do not feed them and put your morning tray into the bathroom and close the door.

- Please do not smoke in the rooms, use the verandas as a smoking area.

- To reduce our plastic waste we do not supply, Toothbrush and paste, razors, shower caps and sewing kits in the rooms but should you need some, please ask our hosts or housekeepers.
- In case of fire, please report immediately to our Fire Assembly Points, which are both parking areas (the main lodge parking and the Sirikoi House parking).

In learning about the critical cultural and economic importance of their livestock, you will be shown around their traditionally built homes. You will also share in their rich singing and dancing.

THE SIRIKOI STORY

THE OWNERS

Willie and Sue Roberts, the founders and owners of Sirikoi, have poured their heart and soul into the lodge, and it shows. The family has been in the safari industry for over 50 years, guiding safaris across the continent and developing lodges across Kenya. Sirikoi is the third lodge Willie Roberts built, his first being when he was just nineteen, with no help from an architect – just vision, experience and a great sense of style. Sue’s passion for botany has resulted in beautiful grounds, rare creepers adding character to chimneys, and the organic vegetable garden – the most prodigious of any lodge garden in Kenya.

Their safari and conservation legacy extends beyond Sirikoi. Willie and Sue’s daughter, Caro, continues to operate Willie’s luxury mobile camps in some of Kenya’s most beautiful and remote areas, and their late son, Richard, has an award-winning camp in the Masai Mara and was a powerful advocate for elephant conservation, having founded the Mara Elephant Project.

THE TEAM

A large team of 68 staff work tirelessly behind the scenes to look after just 18 guests when the lodge is full. Most of the Sirikoi staff are from the neighbouring villages close by and have worked at the lodge for years, developing and learning new skills along the way. There is a great sense of pride and enjoyment, which shines through the team’s cheerful service and attention to detail.

OUR GUIDES

Maasai and Samburu warriors passionate about their land and culture guide guests throughout their stay, sharing their ancient knowledge of the area and animals and their fascinating way of life. This wisdom mixed with good humour and fantastic wildlife sightings make for truly memorable game drives.

SIRIKOI TIMELINE

- 2003 ● Willie and Sue purchased the land with some friends (7500 acres in total), and secured it for wildlife habitat. Willie decided the area next to the Sirikoi stream was where they would build the lodge, because it was out of the wind, would always be green and the wildlife would always be close by because of the water. At the time, the green lawns of Sirikoi were sugar cane crop fields and overgrown bush.
- 2004 ● The four Luxury Tents were built and Sirikoi officially opened. In those days the main living and dining area was a tent on the lawn near the Sirikoi stream.
- 2006 ● The main mess or living area and Sirikoi dining deck were built – two of Sirikoi’s most impressive features today.
- 2007 ● The swimming pool went in.
- 2008 ● The Sirikoi Cottage was completed and ready for guests.
- 2010 ● In December the Sirikoi House opened it’s doors to our first House guests.
- 2011 ● Shortly after the Sirikoi House opened, the dining deck at the House was built.

GUIDE PROFILES

JAMES NANGONYE

James is from one of the smallest sub-tribes of the Maasai, called Ngwesi and was born in a small village called Leperua. He always dreamed of becoming a guide and started showing people around his village when he was still in high school.

The experience of meeting new people from around the world is something James loves and it is still a highlight of his job. James' most exciting sighting so far has been a Martial eagle killing a baby impala, with a Crowned eagle swooping in to try and snatch the prey. James has worked at Sirikoi since 2010, starting out in the workshop. With Willie Roberts encouraging his interest in guiding, he worked his way up to becoming Head Guide. He married Elizabeth, a chef from the Sirikoi kitchen, and together they have two children. James is a KPSGA Silver guide.

LEGEI LEIRO

Legei was also born in the Leperua area and is part of the Maasai Ngwesi sub-tribe. He was first attracted to wildlife whilst out with his cattle on the traditional four year period of testing which every warrior must undergo, and then met Willie Roberts who brought him to Sirikoi in 2010 to train as a guide.

Today, Legei is a KPSGA Bronze guide, and is preparing to attain his Silver level in the near future. Seeing the rare Sitatunga antelope on Lewa has been a huge highlight for Legei and he feels passionately about protecting nature for future generations. Legei is married with a young son and daughter.

ONESMUS LESIATA

Onesmus is a Samburu from Mwamba, north of Lewa. He worked for Save the Elephants – one of the most reputable conservation organizations in Africa before pursuing his dream to become a guide. He has years of experience guiding in renowned conservancies and wilderness areas in Kenya, including the Masai Mara and Ol Pejeta, before coming to Lewa Wildlife Conservancy. What Onesmus finds special about Lewa is that, unlike many other conservancies and parks in Kenya, there is a high concentration of Black and White rhino and he feels passionate about protecting these amazing animals for future generations to enjoy. Onesmus is a Silver KPSGA Guide, and is married with children.

PETER KAMASIAI

Peter is from Ngare Ndare village, which neighbours the Lewa Borana landscape. He belongs to the local sub-tribe of the Maasai known as Llaikipiak Maasai. He joined the Sirikoi team in 2011 as a waiter, with a dream to become a safari guide. A year after joining Sirikoi, Sue noticed his guiding enthusiasm and potential, and he began joining guests on game drives as a spotter. In 2013 he passed his Bronze level guiding exam with flying colours. His most memorable wildlife sighting on Lewa was seeing a lioness and very young cub stalk and kill a wounded zebra at the waterhole. The lioness was clearly showing the young cub how to hunt and how to suffocate prey – the cub even had a turn to hold the zebra by the neck. Within a few minutes, the distress call from the zebra attracted around 15 hyena, and another two lions from a different pride! Peter is married and has three young daughters, who love elephants and do a lot of elephant paintings at home.

NGILA LOITAMANY JOHNSON

Ngila is from a small village called Arijjio in north Laikipia. With over 10 years experience as a professional safari guide, he holds a Silver level badge from KPSGA. Previously he worked with the Lewa Wildlife Conservancy research department for a year, which gave him a wide range of field and bush experience. He was also the Head of the Archaeology Department on Lewa, responsible for establishing a museum at the Children's Education Centre. Ngila's most memorable sighting was watching two jackals kill and begin feeding on a young impala fawn, when a Martial eagle swooped down and grabbed not only the fawn, but one of the jackals too (which had the fawn in its hold) and fly off with them both. The jackal eventually let go his hold of the fawn and fell to the ground - none the worse for its first flight! Ngila is married with two children.

SUSTAINABILITY

We are proud to be a member of “The Long Run”; a global sustainable travel movement helping businesses, nature, and people work together for a better future.

As a proud member of this global community of nature-based tourism businesses, Sirikoi is committed to driving holistic sustainability guided by the 4Cs: Conservation, Community, Culture and Commerce.

CONSERVATION

Sirikoi plays a vital role in conserving the flora and fauna: of the region by actively managing a 3,000-acre footprint on the immediate boundary of the Lewa Wildlife Conservancy. Through our reforestation project, we have established exclusion zones with an aim to restore and regenerate forests that were destroyed by past agricultural land use practises.

Guests contribute direct to conservation when they visit Sirikoi, the conservation fee is channelled to Lewa Wildlife Conservancy who utilise it for a variety of projects involving the community and wildlife.

COMMUNITY

We believe in empowering communities and creating gender balance, approximately 75% of our workforce is from the local community with 30% being women.

We work closely with the local communities in our area and remains dedicated to building strong relationships by actively participating in education programs related to conservation, finances, computer skills, and organic farming. We also support various programs such as bursaries, internships, health initiatives, Life Skills programs, school feeding, and income generation enterprises. This translates to about 3000 people being impacted directly and indirectly.

If you would you like to know more about our community support efforts or how you can help contribute and support our projects, please speak to your Host on duty, or email our General Manager, maria@sirikoi.com

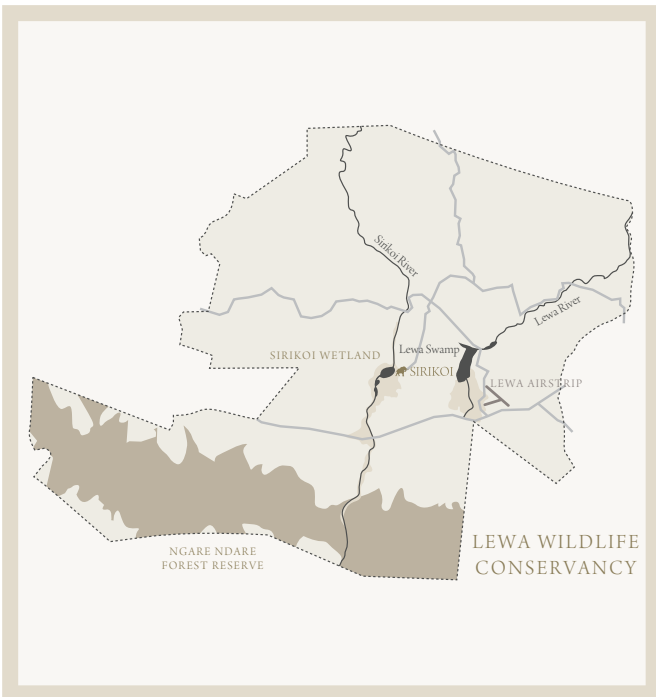

CULTURE

We believe that cultural diversity should be celebrated and strive to promote the preservation of different cultures by encouraging our staff to stay true to their cultural heritage. Our team love to share stories of their history and culture with our guests through campfire talks.

COMMERCE

We are committed to ethical and sustainable practices and make every effort to purchase as much as possible from local farmers, shops, and curio sellers. We encourage our guests to participate in cultural village visits and enjoy traditional dances from the local community, providing a direct source of income to them.

LOCATION

LEWA WILDLIFE CONSERVANCY

Sirikoi Lodge is surrounded by 68,000 acres of the pure wilderness of Lewa Wildlife Conservancy, and the location of the lodge is truly exceptional.

The Lewa Wildlife Conservancy is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and an award-winning model for community conservation. Starting out with just 15 black rhinos in 1984, Lewa's rhino population has since risen steadily, making the Conservancy the pioneer rhino conservation success story in Kenya and East Africa. Today there are 75 black and 96 white rhino protected on the Conservancy, with over 20 having been moved to restock previously inhabited areas as well as introduce the species to new suitable and secure habitats.

Lewa Wildlife Conservancy is a vital wildlife corridor connecting Kenya's wild and arid north with the lush Mount Kenya ecosystem. The wildlife is abundant and includes many rare endangered species such as reticulated giraffe, black and white rhino, and the largest resident population of Grevy's zebra in the world. Elusive leopard and wild dog sightings, and families of elephant have carved Sirikoi into their migratory routes and almost daily big herds can be seen just in front of the Sirikoi deck for hours at a time.

Find out more about Lewa Wildlife Conservancy and all they are doing for conservation and communities at www.lewa.org.

THE MAASAI AND SAMBURU PEOPLE

The Maasai are one of the last remaining intact African tribes. They are a Nilotic group (originally from the lower Nile valley) inhabiting northern, central and southern Kenya and northern Tanzania. The Maasai are one of the most distinct and recognized tribes in Africa, known for their colourful dress, pastoral customs and their reputation as warriors. Essentially there are 22 geographic sectors or sub tribes of the Maasai community, each one having its own customs, appearance, leadership and dialects. Many Maasai communities live within very close proximity to renowned wildlife areas, and are helping to pioneer a new era of community conservation.

Traditional Maasai culture and entire way of life is centered on their cattle – their primary source of food and measure of wealth. They eat the meat, drink the milk daily, and drink the blood of their cattle on occasion. Bulls and oxen are slaughtered for meat on special occasions and for ceremonies. More recently, some of the Maasai have grown dependent on food produced in other areas such as maize meal, rice, potatoes and cabbage. Cattle and livestock also form the basis of all trade within Maasai culture.

The Maasai live in settlements called manyattas, which is a group of huts forming a unit within a common fence. The houses are loaf-shaped and made of mud, sticks, grass, cow dung and cows' urine.

Maasai society is strongly patriarchal in nature, with elder men, sometimes joined by retired elders, deciding most major matters for each Maasai group. A full body of oral law covers many aspects of behavior. Women are in charge of making the houses, collecting water and firewood, milking the cattle and cooking for the family. The men are warriors and are in charge of the group's security while the boys are in charge of herding the livestock. During seasons of drought, both the warriors and the boys are responsible for herding the livestock. The older men are called Elders and are in charge of day-to-day activities.

WILLIE ROBERTS

Willie Roberts was one of the greatest and most instrumental ambassadors for wildlife conservation in Kenya. He set up the first Wildlife Conservancy in Kenya in the Maasai Mara, essentially founding the 'conservancy movement', saving the greater area from being carved up for farming, laying down a clear path of success for community conservancies in Kenya and setting an example and an inspiration for others to follow.

In the 1980s, Willie and Sue moved to the Maasai Mara with the intentions of setting up a farm, but soon realized the land is better suited for wildlife. Willie was the first in the Maasai Mara to convert his rented land into a conservancy that the Maasai landowners could collect wildlife-based income from - he called it Ol Chorro Oiroua Group Ranch.

At the time, the area was rife with human/wildlife conflict, inspiring Willie to change their plan to farm. Instead, he set out to persuade the Minister of Environment to change land use policy so local communities benefitted from wildlife. The legal battle was long, but the lawyer who won the case in Kenya's High Court, Stephen Mwenezi, was one of the speakers to pay tribute to Willie in the Mara on April 27, 2019. Over a thousand people attended Willie's memorial in the Mara, including many Maasai who now protect wildlife as an asset.

"At a young age, he navigated political minefields, negotiating with President Moi, Paramount Chief Ole Ntutu, and many Trans Mara County Council representatives, to set up the Ol Chorro Oiroua Wildlife Management Association. Group Ranch, and the Mara Conservancy. Willie achieved all of this under great political pressure and personal risk, and it marked a turning point in the Kenya Conservation Landscape. Today, conservancies are well established throughout Kenya thanks to his pioneering work."

- Prof. Judi Wakhungu, former Minister of Environment,
Water, & Natural Resources for Kenya.

Willie didn't stop there - he went on to establish the Mara Conservancy in an area that was known for its rampant poaching and hunting.

Ian Craig, the founder of Lewa Wildlife Conservancy and Willie's brother-in-law and lifelong friend, attributes the success of the rhino population on Lewa to Willie, who in 1992 bid on White Rhino at an auction in South Africa. With scarcely the money to even transport the rhino back to Kenya, Willie gambled with characteristic confidence. That starter population of 5 rhino from South Africa resulted in the 80 White Rhino on Lewa Wildlife Conservancy today, nearly three decades later.

His final legacy, Sirikoi, evolved from Willie's lifelong commitment to wildlife conservation combined with community development. On hearing a large parcel of land adjacent to Lewa Wildlife Conservancy was at risk of development, he and partners purchased it to secure it for wildlife and incorporate it within Lewa Wildlife Conservancy. Once again they converted farmland into a wildlife sanctuary, but this time, at the forefront of sustainably green design, added solar-powered energy and a garden supplying vegetables, fruits and flowers to the lodge. Sirikoi soon became Kenyas top Eco lodge. 3 months before Willie passed away, Sirikoi was voted Africa's Leading Luxury Lodge 2017 in the World Travel Awards, becoming the only lodge in Kenya to achieve this title.

Willie spent his life in conservation and helping communities living in wildlife areas to exist in harmony with each other. Willie was a true visionary, and one of the forefathers of wildlife conservation in Kenya.
